DOUBLE LEGAL STAMPS FORENOONS

GILCHRIST CO

Washington and Winter Streets

We Pay $2.00 in Cash for Full Books of Legal Trading Stamps

Or you may select any merchandise in this store up to $2.50 in value—or we will pay 20¢ per hundred stamps for partly filled books. Compare this offer with what you can get for other stamps, and remember, we give double Legal Stamps forenoons.

Our After Stocktaking Sale Offers Large Savings

Our Before Stocktaking Sales practically cleared our stocks of all odds and ends and unseasonable goods, enabling us to offer special sales of reasonable merchandise bought under price. Every item on this page presents a distinct price saving. In some departments a few lots were left over—these are still further reduced in price.

The true economic possibilities of shopping at Gilchrist's are shown by the absolutely desirable merchandise at prices that you can prove to be as low as or lower than in other stores.

The remarkable values offered this week in women's coats and suits are an evidence of our intention to thoroughly clear out all apparel that has been in stock over two months.

Last Fall you probably wished you had bought a fur coat in the Spring and saved a generous sum. Here's another opportunity, and a better one, for the price cuts are unusually large.

Caracul Cloth Coats—Illustration shows the model of a Caracul Cloth Coat, made full 32 inches long, large shawl collar, unlined sleeves with cuffs, lustre broadtail pony skin, lined, interlined and lining throughout guaranteed. 8.98

TWO-FARE EXTORTION IS STILL WORKED BY "L" IN DUDLEY ST. PUZZLE

At least fifty per cent double fares in the Dudley street terminal during the rush hours between 4:30 and 7 o'clock last night and about 200 times as many passengers were crowded into the cars until they were gulped to their proper places by kindly passengers or one of the conductors.

The terminal is still a gloriously grotesque structure, but it is being replaced by a new terminal building which is now being instituted by the company. It is a fact long known by the public that the Dudley street terminal is one of the congested conditions and because of this it is being replaced.

It is about this loop, where those taking Worcester, Grove Hall, Warren street and Hill street avenue cars, that the greatest complaints are made. It is the busiest part of the elevated structure and yet thousands who seek it are confined in the smallest space in the entire building. The trouble is the new method of admission to the car lines from the Washington and Warren street entrances. Previously one paid a fare and once in could take a car in any direction. Conditions are now so complex that many persons pay their fare at the north-bound gate to find they wanted south-bound cars, and vice versa.

platform is hardly wide than six feet deep and thirty feet long. And on this rickety structure the Elevated is taking out an average of more than 15,000 passengers an hour in the busy part of the day.

Women Trampled in Rush.
Men and women stepped on each other in their frantic efforts to get into (or to) a car. While the hordes were being emptied from the cars more persons than already could be crowded on the platforms were waiting for almost half an hour and were long enough to bring her to her destination, which was the North station. She was obliged to pay another fare. She did not even get a ride for her first ticket.

Another girl, bound for the South station, made the same error. She did not have another ticket with her and had to Six guards were stationed there to help keep order, but they simply took up room. One man with a megaphone called out to the crowds where their car was coming. "Dorchester the fifth in the rear, Blue Hill avenue next, Norfolk street," and so on; and at each rest from his megaphone he would pause and say, "You may now beg if from a kindly stranger."

was a stampede of the crowd attempting to fight its way through the mass in front of the part of the platform where the car rolled in.

Double Fares Extorted.

It is on the lower level that the trouble counted fifty in three hours.

The Chinese puzzle feature of the station is getting worse rather than better. The station is certainly ingenious. It is possible to start at any one point in the hunt for another and invariably to return to the starting place or else find oneself on the wrong side of the turnstile.

about double fares exists. Passengers arriving from the heart of the city are and the Railroad Commission to ACT.

NORTH ATTLEBORO, Jan. 29.—The biggest fight in the history of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in this section, a fight which has resulted in the suspension of the entire division 10 of this town, will

The bill was filed by William R. Schanton, a Boston lawyer, and is labeled House Bill No. 1088. In reference to President Reynolds would not accept in suspension and called a special meeting of the division. He was again elected president by those who attended and was installed. County President Brady then suspended the whole division of 200 men and placed an attachment on the $5,000 funds of the division.

A special meeting was called by President Reynolds for Friday night last, but President Brady got there first. He sent Deputy Sheriff John Meade and some men there with an attachment on the hall and furniture and when the members got there they were told they could not enter. They went to Columbus Hall and held

At this meeting a committee was chosen to fight the case of the division in the courts. Former Mayor Hugh Carroll of Pawtucket was engaged as counsel and a lively fight is promised in the March term of court in Pawtucket when the case comes

The County Board has not been idle. It has hired Judge Wood of Tazewell to handle the legal end of their case and is making preparations to prevent the division from getting back into the hall or obtaining control of the $2,000.

DRACUT WAGE DISPUTE. LOWELL, Jan. 29.—Joan Barker of the Merrimack Woolen Mills, in Dracut, are in dispute with the mill officials over a cut in their wages of two hours' pay weekly. The Joan Barkers say this is the only mill that has cut wages, because of the reduction of hours, which went into effect on January 1. As wooden boom fixers are scarce, if the trouble should continue, some inconvenience might be experienced by the mill to get competent help.

LABAMA GULF Coast Lands are the most fertile and productive in the United States. Our Home

Gardens Farms at Dyas, Baldwin County, within an hour's ride of Mobile's 65,000 population, on the Main Line of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, are ideally located for raising and shipping fruits, garden truck and all of the big money crops that bring fancy prices in northern markets. Southern Florida has 37 hours from Chicago; Texas Lands, 48 hours from St. Louis; California fruit growers are four days from the great central markets. Home Gardens Farms are only 17 hours from St. Louis and 25 hours from Chicago, which can be reached by a perfect fast freight service many hours sooner than from any other portions of the Gulf Coast. We offer the greatest chance either for the Investor or Home Seeker ever before known in the history of this Country. Fortune awaits the shrewd investor who is awake to the enormous possibilities of this highly productive section of the So. by Greatest Garden Spot. Now is the time to act.

Leave Snow and Cold Forever

YOU CAN JOIN THESE PEOPLE AND HAVE YOUR OWN 10-ACRE FARM WITH THE PERPETUAL SUNSHINE AND FLOWERS OF FLORIDA BY PAYING THE TRIFLING SUM OF

17 CENTS A DAY

Today, in Florida, roses are in bloom, farmers are working in their shirt sleeves, the children of the North, East and West have moved to their sunny, safe homes. We have already sold more than 1,000 of these farms, and our office, in fact, is almost completely filled with the names of people who have purchased our farms and are now enjoying the life of the South. The only reason why we have not sold more is because we have not had time to get the word out. We have a limited number of these farms, each containing 10 to 20 acres, and we have only a few more left. If you are interested in this, write to us today and we will send you a full description of the farms and the terms of purchase. The price is only 17 cents a day, and you can have the farm for your own, with the perpetual sunshine and flowers of Florida.

READ WHAT THE PEOPLE SAY WHO HAVE PURCHASED AND SETTLED ON OUR LAND

The Evidence Beyond Dispute. Think, I will tell you to own One of These Farms, Acquire Independence and a Delightful Home for the Future. CAN MAKE A GOOD LIVING HERE. The people who have purchased our farms and settled on our land are now enjoying the life of the South. They are happy, healthy, and prosperous. They have found a new home, a new life, and a new future. They have found the life of the South, with its perpetual sunshine and flowers, and its warm, friendly people. They have found a home where they can make a good living, and where they can enjoy the life of the South. They have found a home where they can be happy, healthy, and prosperous. They have found a home where they can be free, and where they can be independent. They have found a home where they can be the owners of their own land, and where they can be the masters of their own fate. They have found a home where they can be the people of the South, and where they can be the people of the future.

Land in Florida that a few years ago you could buy for $20 and $25 per acre cannot now be purchased for $250 and $500. Even though you cannot now give up your present business, an investment here at 17 cents per day will bring you immense return simply because the thousands who are improving land about you will advance the value of your tract. A few cents per day placed in a farm here will give you a profitable investment even before you have completed your payments, and you will not realize that you are making an investment, so small are these payments under our plan.

MR. HEARST'S OWN STORY OF HIS TRIP
THROUGH CLOUDLAND WITH PAULHAN

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 29—William Randolph Hearst, who took a trip with Paulhan in his airship at the aviation meet here, describes his experience in a most vivid manner. His story of the flight, which was one of the most successful of the entire aviation contests, follows:

BY WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

NO one could watch an airplane skimming swiftly and gracefully through the air without wanting to fly. No one could see M. Paulhan manuevering his machine, easily and skilfully, without feeling complete confidence in that gentleman's ability to fly. I had sat watching the aeroplanes for two hours, on this beautiful afternoon, at the Los Angeles meet. I had seen them lift nimbly from the ground, scurry swiftly around the course, rise to great heights, depart on excursions into the surrounding country and finally return and alight diagonally in front of the grand stand.

I had seen one machine alight rather unexpectedly on its nose, as it were, but that was not the Paulhan machine. His always did exactly as it was told. Consequently, when M. Paulhan's manager presented M. Paulhan's kind invitation to take a small excursion with him in his airship, which was "waiting at the door," I accepted with much pleasure. When I approached the machine, I was impressed with its apparent frailness. M. Paulhan, who weighs 140 pounds, seemed to harmonize with the machine, but I, who weigh 200, did not.

The men who were running alongside the machine, led by a short of good by, and we rose majestically into space. We left the communities of the westward world behind us, in a moment, and I found a new life, a new era. The smoothness of flying is difficult to describe for the human mind operates through analogy and is confused with comparisons, and there is nothing with which to compare the sensation of flying. I felt that great sense of exhilaration which all aviators describe, and, in addition, a deep serenity—a calm enjoyment of what seemed to be the perfect conditions of a new and better state.

RAPS ARCHITECTS FOR HEAVY 'EXTRAS'

Study Official Criticises Lack of Resources in Giving the Public a Right Cost.

OWNERS ON WRONG TACK

Often Have Erroneous Idea of Expense Necessary for the Completion of Work.

I replied to a number of e-mails, and a few days later I got a letter from the Sunday Assurance, a State official who has had extensive years' experience as an architect and a former architect to answer some of the questions I had asked. He said that the building was not the first project but a significant one for the city.

In answer to the question "Why is it that contractors' bids on a building are most always under the architect's estimate of its cost?" I would reply, "He doesn't know." He said that the architect is not the one who is in charge of the building. He said that the architect is the one who is in charge of the building. He said that the architect is the one who is in charge of the building.

architect? I would not. I do not think it in the benefit of your readers that with one lone exception, I have ever built for them without having him with a feeling that he should be receiving the services of an architect again. I would respectfully disagree.

But one comment on the State's building notes that at different times another man in a corporation has been complaining it has built structures.

In a case a little of mine, after I had been talking for him, employed by the State, of another building, I was the first to say that the State should be the authority building.

FACTORY FOR CAMBRIDGE
Carnt & Co. to Build Opposi-
World Shoe Structure.

Joseph Caust & Co., whose manufactory is in, have bought a 42,000 square feet of land in Cambridge, At the corner of West and Third streets, opposite to the World's Bazaar and the site of the old fire station, where all the new buildings will be erected. The new buildings will be erected on the land leaving a sufficient area to the rear of the place for the use of the building to read, and to employ about 500 operatives, will be built in 1890. Whittier Barnes negotiated the sale of land.

Duke Challenges the Editor.

This note was delivered to Mr. Bennett himself, and was signed by the duke, the unwarranted insult to a young American girl, printed the letter with the answer, the headline, "The noblest her name could have been mentioned."

When this appeared, Dr. Braggins said his friend, the Duke, would be coming to the city.

continued. Official inquiry has revealed the existence of a system under which the children of the Italian immigrants in the Italian country districts, and drafted into Southern France to work in the glass foundries.

Repeating conditions exist in these foundries where the children are subjected to a grueling work schedule, and a great decreasing quantity and an extremely rapid one from 26,312 in 1901 to 102,944 in 1905. Such a drop has been seen in a great many other countries.

It is noted that Mr. Bennett left France indirectly for Brazil, says he has no further information, and that he has asked the editor to meet him in a day or two. He is now in the city of Rio de Janeiro, where is Mr. Bennett's daughter. And he is now working as a day laborer in the city of Rio de Janeiro. The editor says that Mr. Bennett is a very well known man, and that he is a very well known man.

SOCIETY is enjoying to the full its last gasp of gaiety for the season and going its swiftest pace.

Among the large events which remain on the calendar are the second of the Cinderella subscription dances, Tuesday evening, at the Ritz; Mrs. Lowell's masquerade dance on Wednesday evening, at her home; the Ritz ball, Saturday evening, at the Ritz; the Ritz Ball, Monday, at the Ritz; Frederick Cunningham's house dance, on the night of February; the second and last of the Somerset subscription dance, on the 8th, and the annual dance at the Harvard Union, the date for which has not been definitely decided.

There are also a number of smaller events, to be mentioned in the most enjoyable of the week's affairs. The patronesses for these smart functions are Mrs. Oliver Ames, Mrs. Joseph L. Ames, Mrs. Glenford Abbott, Mrs. Horiston Bond, Mrs. Edward P. Braman, Mrs. John T. Linzee and Mrs. Richard D. Sears. They are all going through the season which is so enjoyable as this, and so well attired.

The 1931 assembly which officially brings the season to a close takes place Friday night at the Sempore. It's the largest, most fashionable and most exclusive of the remaining pre-Enten games. Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer and R. W. Wendell, Jr., whose engagement has just been announced to Barbara H. Gibson will lead the cotillion. The actresses are

HURRYING TO MARRIAGE ALTAR

As weddings in Lent are considered chaste and a hat to correspond, trimmed with white ribbons, and Master Charles May, nephew of the bride, was the best man. The ceremony took place before Ash Wednesday, as our calendar requires, and the wedding party, consisting of the bride, bridegroom, bridesmaids, and groomsmen, were the train.

Quite the largest and most important will be that at Emmanuel Church, where Miss L. (Bertha) Venable, well-known member of the Ancient and Modern Order of the M. W. T. M., will be the most potent bulwark of our wife exclusive set, wedded James Baughman of London.

An interesting wedding which took place in New Haven Wednesday was that of Miss Helen M. Hilditch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Hilditch, of the Hilditch and John Lortimer Hall of Boston, a well known member of the Tennis and Racquet Country and Tackley clubs.

The ceremony took place at noon and was performed in the chapel of Christ Episcopal Church by the rector, Rev. Fredrick M. Burgess, assisted by Rev. T. A. J. Johnson, the bridegroom, Mr. Hilditch, of New Haven, was formerly rector of the church. He was killed by an automobile the miraculous.

The Aladdin story was as pleasing to grown men in the days when it was first told as it is pleasing to children to-day.

The idea that upon a human being was conferred the power to do seemingly superhuman things, to build with no effort of his own marvellous palaces, to transport himself magically from place to place through the air, to crush kings who opposed him by a word, had a strong fascination for a people who disliked to do things, but who delighted in the idea of having things done for them.

In that day people were dreamers, not doers. They had the imagination to conceive miracles, but they lacked the energy to accomplish them.

And when the story of the fortunate Prince of China was related to them each listener put himself for a time in Aladdin's place, and fondly imagined how delightful it would be if he (the listener) could, by rubbing a lamp, summon up a misty servant to do his bidding, find him a beautiful wife, install her in a diamond-encrusted palace and destroy all his rivals in her affections.

Among a people composed wholly of dreamers there could be nothing but dreams. For ages the half-grown children, whose years might have made them adults, delighted in tales of miracles of magic—of enchanted carpets that carried their owners through space, of empires created overnight, of treasures of gold and precious stones, hidden away by fairies for favored mortals to find and enjoy.

Children in mind, they took their pleasures like children, fought blind, furious wars, as schoolboys fight, over fancied grievances, fled in terror from comets or invested dumb brutes with God-like powers.

But all the time the intellectual development of the race was progressing. Presently men began to think, as well as to dream. To the imagination to conceive ideas was added the energy to execute them.

Great were the story tellers of old—welcomed in every community, petted, rewarded liberally, listened to with eager attention.

Yet how feeble were their imaginations compared with the imaginations of men who came later, and really did wonders far more marvellous than any performed by Aladdin's genie!

Not a magician of fable was ever credited with summoning from out of the earth the materials with which to build an airship, by means of which common men could really master the air.

Never lived in Arabia the story teller who could foresee the telegraph and telephone, the electric railroad, the phonograph or any one of a hundred marvels which we now accept as everyday matters.

For Aladdin to rub a lamp and bring to his feet a foggy slave to build him a palace was wonderful. But far more wonderful was the feat of Michael Angelo in imagining a cathedral which should be more beautiful and more wonderful than any building that could be conceived by an Oriental mind.

Michael Angelo was a dreamer, too. He might have devoted his life to picturing in words to admiring hearers the wonders that were conjured up by his brain. But he was not content to be a dreamer alone.

He made his dreams come true. When he was fourteen years old, a poor boy, apprenticed a painter, he was found by Lorenzo de Medici studying the marbles in the garden of San Marco. Lorenzo, a lover of the beautiful, and keenly appreciative of the talent he found in the pale, imaginative little fellow, took him to his palace and gave him every opportunity to study.

The boy dreamed, and studied, and worked incessantly, trying to give to his hands the skill to impress on canvas and on marble the conceptions of his brain.

In 1461, the year before Columbus, another dreamer and doer, discovered a new world, young Michael Angelo met the great Savonarola, whose kindness and interest made the boy his worshipper from that day forth.

After long years of work that seems unbelievable to the modern artist he was brought to Rome by Pope Julius II. to design his mausoleum.

Repeated designs were made and rejected, and although the beautiful dream of the sculptor was never carried out, he rose superior to discouragements, making statue after statue, painting picture after picture, till at last he was given the task of making substitute designs for St. Peter's Cathedral.

The life of this genius has been an inspiration to every artist who has followed him.

His was a brain that could see and a hand that could do. The world had grown better, or it could not have produced Michael Angelo. The intellectual development of the human race had progressed, or his noble work could never have been done.

While the artist, sculptor and architect was still a lad, studying with pathetic eagerness the art that he found about him, another dreamer, Christopher Columbus, was rubbing the lamp of thought and preparing to show the world another miracle.

Columbus had had his dreams, but he was not willing to content himself with the mere telling of them.

Deep study had made him sure that it was possible to sail around the world, perhaps to India, and there to reach the kingdoms whose barbarian magnificence had been told by the traveller Marco Polo.

Such a dream may have come to other men in an earlier day. If it did they told it to their fellows perhaps, speculated upon its splendor and turned to other things.

But the world was growing wiser as it grew older. Columbus was living in a better time

Perhaps no other man with a great idea to work out his met with so many and such baffling discouragements.

But Columbus persisted, and at last, when his little fleet was fitted out, he sailed away over a trackless ocean to find a continent—an achievement with which no possible modern feat, save a journey to another planet, could compare.

The age that gave the world Columbus and Michael Angelo was a far greater age than that in which the trembling Sultana told her lord and master the wonder stories that saved her life.

There were still dreamers, but some of them were becoming dissatisfied with empty dreams. They wanted to see wonderful realities, and they began to understand that the human brain could do more than merely imagine things.

Between the brutal wars that devastated Europe, and even while hordes of assassins were still plundering and murdering, there were here and there to be found men who thought.

Copernicus was studying the stars and developing a system of astronomy that fired men's imaginations and carried their thoughts forth into the universes.

The great civilization of the Greeks was studied anew. Half a century before Columbus the art of printing had been invented—or imported from the Chinese—and the ideas of the thinkers were thus communicated to others, who in turn began to think for themselves.

They were still dark ages, black with tyranny and oppression, the masses ignorant, the rulers cruel and rapacious.

Aladdin's Genii Are Not to Be Compared with the Wonders Conjured Up by Rubbing the Lamp of Modern Thought.

But thought was spreading, and with it spread the world constantly grew better.

Intellectual development is slow. The average schoolboy of to-day, could he talk to Christopher Columbus, would find him amazingly ignorant of many things that would seem A, B, C to the schoolboy, surprisingly childlike in many beliefs and ideas.

But the schoolboy of to-day is 400 years further along in development than Columbus—which means that for 400 years men have been thinking that he and his fellow schoolboys may benefit.

To-day the great ships that cross the Atlantic bring the works of art of the European masters for the American boy to study; the books of the great writers of the world, and even the remains of Greek and Roman temples. The cable brings news of what all the world is doing, of the results of the most modern thought in government, in science and philosophy.

If a great German doctor discovers a cure for a fatal malarial it can be employed the following day or week or month in New York.

If a brilliant Irishman writes a play that all the people of the world ought to see, it may be produced in all the capitals of the world within a month or two.

The great dreamers of long ago still dream, but they know now how to make their dreams realities.

Morally as well as intellectually the world has grown better, and will grow better. There is promise that the black horror of war will soon be abolished by the concerted action of the nations.

In such a world there is little room for the cynic and the misanthrope. The history of civilization makes it plain that slowly but as surely as the earth moves in its orbit humanity is becoming nobler and greater, and that the beautiful fable of old is the actual fact of to-day.

The Newest French Beauties

H

PARIS is the city of women, and there is always a reigning dynasty of Parisian beauties. They are usually actresses or singers at the cafe concerts, which serve as backgrounds for their beauty.

Among the not reckoned from all over the world worship at the shrine of these beauties, and kings and princes head the procession.

Most people have heard of Cleo de Merode and Liane de Pougy and Emilienne d'Alencon and Jeanne Granger, who entertained King Edward when he was younger. They are more or less of the past. The new reigning beauties of the boulevards at the present moment are shown on this page.

Cortola Valencia, a Spanish dancer, is one of the most beautiful women ever seen in Paris. She is a Spanish girl from Malaga, and she dances as only the daughters of Castile can dance. She has an exquisite figure and face and the grace of a bird. Her beauty is of the typical rich dark Spanish style, and her eyes are wonderful. She is a dainty creature, and speaks French with an enchanting accent.

She is a great friend of Don Jaime de Bourbon, the Carlist Pretender to the Spanish throne. When he was compelled to leave Paris at the death of his father, Don Carlos, he begged her to leave France with him, but Cortola was well content with Paris. This was a crushing blow to Don Jaime, who was so conceited as to believe that she really cared for him, and so he went away furious. Cortola the joyous has since been seen in the society of Prince Philip of Coburg.

The lovely Valencia has many exquisite jewels, and her furs are the talk of Paris. She has a coat of Russian ermine sable that reaches to the ground and cost $60,000. When she appears on the street it is out of her carriage a small mob follows her, for nowhere in the world are furs appreciated as in Paris, where even the street sweepers know the value of them.

Laurent Floquet is a sumptuous beauty

She has a creamy skin, dark, soft eyes and a superb figure. She has been called the hope of Russia, because she attracts the Russian Grand Dukes away from home so persistently. She has received many offers from Russian managers to go to St. Petersburg and Moscow, but she will not leave her beloved Paris. They argue that the world desires to see her, but she responds that the world comes to her. Just at present Floquet has the Grand Duke Nicholas at her feet.

Floquet is one of the most smartly dressed women in Paris. She is a striking figure at the races, in the Bois and at the great restaurants. She wears her clothes with remarkable grace, and is a stunning looking creature.

Liane de Vries is another of the Paris "royal beauties," as they are called. She is admired by a German Prince of royal blood, who is desperately in love with her. He is a handsome fellow, and is determined not to submit to the will of the Emperor, who

LADY DUFF-GORDON ON HER ART

ON THIS page last Sunday it was announced that Lady Duff-Gordon, of London, the greatest living creator of fashions, and known as her famous establishment in London as "Lucile," had arranged to open an American branch at No. 17 West Thirty-ninth street, New York City. By special arrangement with Lady Duff-Gordon, she will conduct the Fashion Department of this newspaper and will write the Fashion article each Sunday and supply the illustrations from sketches or photographs of the newest designs in her New York and London establishments.—Editor.

"The great distinguishing difference between the many makers of things to wear and the few very few great dressmakers lies in the fact that the real creator and leader of fashion must be a true artist."

"The really great dressmaker must have a natural born sense of color, as in the true knowledge of color harmonies, a sense of proportion, an appreciation of the general scheme of fashion, a power of imagination, a keenly good knowledge of human anatomy, a power of understanding of the human mind, and, perhaps, above all, a thorough grasp on the good principles of good taste, and the power to apply the resources of practicality to art."

"The elder Worth was a great dress designer in the days when we now still stand for the high art of creator and designer of the perfect gown as applied to each individual for whom he made a gown. But who is now to take the place of the great French couturier? In London, and she is a very good designer in her own right."

Be Made by Education?

Upset the Teachings of Psychology and Demonstrated That Our Present School Methods Are All Wrong?

I Prodigies.

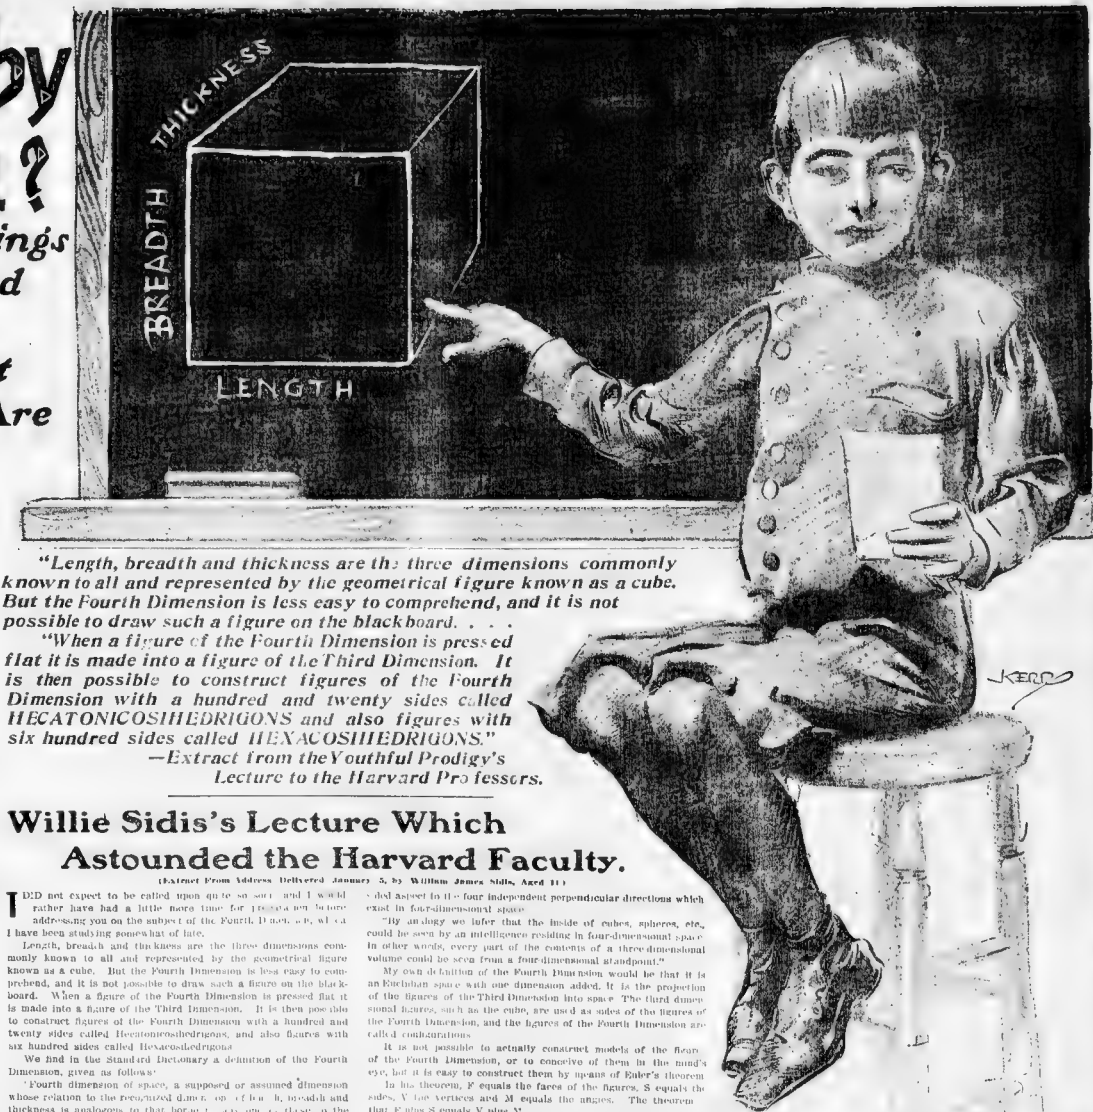

most of the prodigies of the world have been of the order of the following: Zerch Colburn, the Vermont farmer's boy, was an attentive scholar, and an expert calculator in his boyhood. He made extraordinary calculations at sight, and it is even reported that he was able to multiply the number 100,000 by 100,000 in his mind. The answer to this sum is 10,000,000,000. He had developed himself in secret to reasoning out mathematical problems.

Jedediah Briston was an Englishman who exhibited a mathematical power, but at the age of twelve he devoted himself to learning as much of all the free time he could give to his studies. At about the same time he composed a work called "Penguin: a poem in twelve books."

Thomas Robinson Macaulay, the great historian, read French well at three and had a remarkable knowledge of Latin. At seven he composed a compendium of universal history from the creation to the year 1800. At eight he wrote a treatise designed to convert the natives of all the islands in Christianity. At about the same time he composed a work called "Penguin: a poem in twelve books."

John Fawcett, the seventeenth century French philosopher, was like young Sidis, a mathematical wonder. He was possessed by his father to a degree the student bent of his mind toward mathematics, and turned as far as possible to literature and languages. He even learned to play the lute and work out the mathematical problems which came to his mind with a power of work. He showed, when questioned, that he had worked out for himself the whole theory of geometry, and his fundamental knowledge of the sciences was so limited that he called circles "rounds" and lines "straights." All this he had done not only without any encouraging education, but in spite of influences contrary to his natural bent.

Amper, whose name stands high on the pages of the history of science, taught himself to count with pebbles at the age of three, and even at that early day found out for himself many of the arithmetical theories. The proficiency with which he did it puzzled his studies without parental encouragement. He was a child who was not only a mathematician, but a philosopher. He was a child who was not only a mathematician, but a philosopher. He was a child who was not only a mathematician, but a philosopher.

—Extract from the Youthful Prodigy's Lecture to the Harvard Professors.

Willie Sidis's Lecture Which Astounded the Harvard Faculty.

(Extract from Address Delivered January 5, by William James Sidis, Aged 11)

I DID not expect to be called upon quite so soon, and I would rather have had a little more time for preparation before addressing you on the subject of the Fourth Dimension, but I have been studying some of the late.

Length, breadth and thickness are the three dimensions commonly known to all and represented by the geometrical figure known as a cube. But the Fourth Dimension is less easy to comprehend, and it is not possible to draw such a figure on the blackboard. When a figure of the Fourth Dimension is pressed flat it is made into a figure of the Third Dimension. It is then possible to construct figures of the Fourth Dimension with a hundred and twenty sides called HECATONICOSIHHEDRIGONS, and also figures with six hundred sides called HEXACOSIHHEDRIGONS.

We find in the Standard Dictionary a definition of the Fourth Dimension, given as follows:

"Fourth dimension of space, a supposed or assumed dimension whose relation to the measured dimensions of length, breadth and thickness is analogous to that between any one of these to the other two. Four-dimensional space is a space in which a fictitious conception to explain equations of the fourth degree in analytical geometry, or as an entity beyond the limitations of ordinary experience. The treatment of the fourth and higher dimensions belongs to the geometry of hyper space, or N-dimensional geometry. The conception has been used by investigators of psychic phenomena to explain certain mysterious physical phenomena."

It seems to me that perhaps a more comprehensive grasp of the Fourth Dimension is shown by Nelson's Encyclopedia, in which he defines the Fourth Dimension in this way:

"When we deal with a function of more than three variables we cannot represent it by means of a surface in one space of three dimensions. But we may imagine the existence of a space of higher dimensions, in which the function could be represented by a geometrical reality."

"Some of the properties of space of four dimensions may be imagined, or at least described, by a process of analogy. The point, the line, the surface and the volume are respectively spaces of one, two, three and four dimensions. We are at once that two points bound one finite straight line, four lines bound one square, six squares bound one cube, hence eight cubes will bound a four-dimensional figure, which will have a symmetrical eight-did assist in the four independent perpendicular directions which exist in four-dimensional space.

"By analogy we infer that the inside of cubes, spheres, etc., could be seen by an intelligence residing in four-dimensional space. In other words, every part of the contents of a three-dimensional volume could be seen from a four-dimensional standpoint."

My own definition of the Fourth Dimension would be that it is a Euclidean space with one dimension added. It is the projection of the figures of the Third Dimension into space. The third dimensional figures, such as the cube, are used as sides of the figures of the Fourth Dimension, and the figures of the Fourth Dimension are called HECATONICOSIHHEDRIGONS.

It is not possible to actually construct models of the figures of the Fourth Dimension, or to conceive of them in the mind's eye, but it is easy to construct them by means of Euler's theorem. In his theorem, F equals the faces of the figures, S equals the sides, V the vertices and M equals the angles. The theorem that $F + M = S + V$ equals 2 plus M .

It is possible to take any figure of the Third Dimension and with a few straight lines of the Fourth Dimension. These figures of the Fourth Dimension are called Polyhedrons. It is possible to tell how many faces any given figure of the Fourth Dimension will have by applying Euler's theorem. Some figures of the Fourth Dimension, however, cannot be worked out by this theorem, but must be tried by using logarithms.

When a figure of the Fourth Dimension is pressed flat, as I have already said, it is made into a figure of the Third Dimension. It is possible to construct figures of the Fourth Dimension with a hundred and twenty sides called HECATONICOSIHHEDRIGONS, and also figures with six hundred sides called HEXACOSIHHEDRIGONS. I attach a great value in the working out of my theories to the help given by the editorial staff of the Encyclopedia which enter into many of the problems. Some of the things that I have found out about the Fourth Dimension will aid in the solution of many of the problems of elliptical geometry.

NOTE—The words "HECATONICOSIHHEDRIGONS" are not found in any dictionary, or in any work on mathematics. Willie Sidis himself invented these words to fit his recently—and he very correctly formulated the proper Greek compound word in each instance.

A COMFORTABLE DRESSING OR HOUSE SAGQUE AND A SERVICEABLE NEAT APRON

EASILY MADE
AT HOME

NO. 8562

This practical design for a work apron is the simplest of garments to make, and will be found a real aid in preserving the dress while engaged in work about the house. The skirt is wide and full and furnished with two deep pockets that add considerably to its usefulness.

The gathered bib covers the front of the waist, and is attached to a circular yoke that slips on easily over the head. Flannel gingham was used for the making, but percale, linen and cambric are all suitable for reproduction. The medium size requires 3 1/4 yards of 36-inch material. The pattern is cut in three sizes—small, medium and large.

To obtain this desirable pattern for a house apron, fill in the accompanying coupon and send, with 10 cents in silver or stamps, to

A FEW comfortable dressing sarques are an absolute necessity to a woman's comfort. An exceedingly effective development was made from the design here shown in blue French flannel with white stitching for a finish.

The model is equally appropriate for lawn, dimity, flannelette or silk.

The pattern is cut in six sizes—32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. It requires four yards of 27-inch material for the 36-inch size.

To obtain this new and stylish pattern, fill in the accompanying coupon and mail, with 10 cents in silver or stamps, to

To Every Man Who Runs a Boat or Wants to

A magazine that will enable you to cut down your expenses and at the same time to increase your comfort and enjoyment in your boat. Month by month it brings right to your finger tips all that is progressive, interesting and helpful in the Motor Boating World.

This broad experience is crystallized in the practical suggestive pages of MoToR Boating. Special departments are "Motor Boating Navigation," "New Things for the Motor Boatman," "Yard and Shop," etc., etc. Each page has some helpful hint, some practical suggestion that will do its share in making your boat more truly a source of unqualified enjoyment. From cover to cover there are no articles to be skipped, no pages to be turned blindly. Every contribution will either help or entertain—usually both.

and all charges prepaid, we will forward you Goldie's world famous treatise, "From Novice to Pilot," including a complete exposition on "How To Run a Motor Boat." Merely write your name on a slip of paper, enclose a dollar bill and mail to-day at our risk. The February issue will be particularly good. Therefore please be sure to mail your dollar to-day—now. Remember you thus secure both twelve big issues of MoToR Boating's helpful, suggestive pages, and also Goldie's famous book.
